CHAINED IN A GARRET.

An Eleven-Year-Old Boy the Victim of a Father's Fiendish Cruelty.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—For some time past the neighbors of Julius Schnell of 2915 south Broadway, have been discussing with horror tales of barbarous cruelty practiced by the man upon his 11-year-old son Fred. Not only did the man brutally beat the boy, according to stories of the neighbors, but about three weeks ago he resorted to more stringent means of punishing the lad, and chained him to the floor in the garret. There he kept him for an entire week, according to the neighbors, and but for the intervention of one of the lodgers in the house, would have kept him manacled even longer. Strange stories of how the boy's plight was discovered, his outcries first convincing the neighbors that the house was haunted, and the boy's strange continued absence finally enlightened them as to the cause of the sounds, were freely handled about, and finally came to the ears of the police officers of the second district, who reported the matter to Captain Huebler. Special Officers O'Connors and Schroeder, who had been detailed to investigate the matter, made a report to Captain Huebler yesterday of what they had learned, and when the report was read by Chief Harrigan, to whom it had been forwarded, he immediately instructed Captain Huebler to swear out a warrant against the man to-day. The special officer had interviewed neighbors, among them a Mrs. Schammer and a Mrs. Geist, living next door, and had received from them statements to the effect that Schnell had kept his son chained down for a week, and also secured an admission from the man's wife, that the story was true, except that he had been kept chained up but two days.

Paul Keller, who lives on the first floor of the house of which Schnell occupies the second floor and garrett, says the manacling had been done with a chain as large as Keller's thumb. Schnell admitted having chained the boy to the floor with a dog chain attached to a staple in the floor, the other end fastened around the boy's waist. He stated that the boy was near a window, however, and was regularly given his meals. "I kept him there in the garret three days and three nights," said he, "when Keller told me I must give him the key to the garret and let him release the boy. Keller reasoned with the boy and he promised to do better. He did improve for two or three days, but soon went back to his old habits. He has been perfectly incorrigible and I had to chain him up to keep him from running away. I intend to send him out into the country to-morrow."

STRIKERS DEFEATED.

THE UNIONS REFUSE TO HELP THE RAILWAY STRIKERS.

A New Steamship Line for San Francisco—Another Gold Brick Swindle in California—The Governor of New York Differs with the Victoria Magistrates.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The Sun this morning says: The strike upon the N. Y. Central Railway is practically at an end and the Knights of Labor have suffered the most crushing defeat of their history. The Knights make appeals to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen's Brotherhood, to Switchmen's Unions on other roads in the Vanderbilt system and to kindred organizations begging them to come to their support in their fight against the Central. These appeals have been met with a decided refusal and that settled it. So far as the New York Central is concerned the development of yesterday had a much greater significance than the success of the New York Central in the present struggle. It became apparent that the occasion had been seized by other labor organizations to settle some old scores with the autocrats, the Knights. The revenge is so complete that it promises to amount to a death blow. The squaring of accounts by the Brotherhood of Engineers is the most interesting of all. They have taken ample revenge for their treatment during their strike.

Fatal Explosion.

JOLIET, Ills., Aug. 12.—There was an explosion in the Illinois steel works this morning. Blast furnace No 2, sprung a leak and the molton metal ran out down into the canal. The generating steam caused the explosion. The metal was blown in all directions tearing off the top of the furnace and the roof of the building and John Novak and Oscar Sobwoski, employees, were blown out of existance, and their remains have not been found. Peter Schrier was horribly burned and lived only half an hour. Jim Carthy was burned about the back and will die; several others are slightly burned.

Mysterious Shooting.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—A special to the World from Charleston, S.C., says: Nothing which has happened for many months has so excited the Charleston people as the attempted assassination last night of Geo. Nutter, a well-known Republican politician.

Following as it did close upon the most exciting not to say disgraceful convention at which Nutter was a candidate for county clerk, it greatly intensified the already inflamed political feeling. Nutter is very weak and can speak but little. He says he got wind of the rumor that Wells, colored delegate who was for him, had weakened, and after 11 o'clock he went to Wells' house to enquire as to his position. He saw Wells and left about midnight. After going a short distance, some one shot him with a revolver.

He heard the report, but at first did not know he was shot. He soon fell, however, and was taken home in a carriage. The physician said that the ball entered the breast very near the heart, coming out of the back. He considered the wound dangerous, and wanted to take his patient to the Cincinnati hospital, but the family preferred he should remain here. The police say they have been unable to get any clue so far to the assassin. Nutter has not the least idea who shot him.

Had to Pay Up.

LOUISIANA, Mo., Aug. 12.—Hamilton B. Brunough and Miss Annie Beedle, of Pike county, Ill., presented themselves yesterday afternoon at Wallace & Anderson's circus tent, in answer to an advertisement by the circus company that they would not only defray all expenses of a marriage ceremony, but would include a set of furniture valued at $30 as a present to the blushing bride. The circus people, failing to fill their part of the contract, Mr Brunough and bride-elect proceeded to the office of Justice Homer Murray, who soon made the twain one, and in addition to the beautifully engraved marriage certificate threw in a writ of attachment for $100 against the circus concern, which was finally settled for $40. After paying lawyer's fee, the justice's rake down and a bridal trip to the Louisiana race course, it is presumed there was sufficient left to pay ferriage across the Father of Waters.

Hawaiian Independence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—The steamer Australia arrived from Honolulu today with the following advices:

The forty-seventh anniversary of Hawaiian independence was commenced at Iolani palace Thursday, July 31, it being His Majesty's desire to revive the day. The reception, principally to Hawaiian families, was followed by a lunch in the basement of the palace. Remarks were made by Hoopili Baker and Hon. A. Rosa, the latter recommending the future observance of the day. Members of the Legislature and a few foreign families were among those present. The Hawaiian band was also in attendance.

ANTI-LOTTERY LEAGUE.

Address Issued Denouncing the Gigantic Swindle.

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 11.—The anti-lottery league has issued an address to the people of the United States reciting at length the history of the lottery in Louisiana; its corrupt purchase of legislation to do its will, and override the wishes of the people; the use of its enormous revenues, greater than all the banking capital of the state, in every availably way calculated to hold its monopoly, its corruption of the moral sense of even good people, and its utter carrying away of the ignorant, many of whom suffer privations or steal to get money to play in the lottery.

The aggregate of the schemes of the monthly and semi-annual drawings is fabulous—the sum of $28,000,000 per annum, and the aggregate of their daily drawings is over $20,000,000 more. They receive annually $1,125,000 from writing [illegible] bags, apart from the sale of the regular printed tickets. The schemes of the last drawings were so arranged that they can sell seventy-five per cent. of their tickets, pay ten per cent. for selling, lose all the prizes provided for in the scheme, pay $1,000,000 for exchanges, and still make $5,000,000 profit per annum. This, the address says, shows the scheme to be fraudulent and unfair. It pays but 53 per cent. of the money received, while the licensed lotteries of other nations require the payment of 70 per cent.

The address recommends to congress the immediate adoption of an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting any state from chartering or licensing any lotterry or gift prize, and abolishing those already established, and giving congress the power to enforce prohibition by appropriate legislation; pending that, that all lottery matters be excluded from the mails and express companies.

The anti-lottery convention adjourned sine die to-day. Among the resolutions adopted was one to boycott the Times-Democratic and Daily States, of New Orleans on account of their lottery sentiments. The newspaper committee reported $30,000 guarantee for a newspaper to be published in New Orleans, in opposition to rechartering the lottery.

CALLING OUT THE MILITIA.

Governor Hill and the Victoria Magistrates Do Not Think Alike.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The following telegram was sent to Governor Hill this morning: "New York, Aug. 11.—To Hon. D. B. Hill, Governor of the State of New York, Albany, N. Y.: Captain Michael Auer, commanding the militia at our DeWitt yards, near Syracuse, and who has been there for the past 24 hours, notifies the Sheriff of Onondaga county that he has been directed by the commanding general to suspend operations until the arrival of Major General Farnsworth, who has been ordered there to investigate. The fact is that the strikers and rioters have now been in possession of our property at DeWitt for twenty-four hours. They have prevented our using or occupying it. As far as I can ascertain little or no action has been taken by the authorities to protect our property, or to permit us to take possession. The Sheriff of Onondaga county was appealed to on Saturday. I ask that you will cause such prompt action to be taken as will permit us to operate the road. (Signed) H. WALTER WEBB, third vice-president."

At 1:15 p. m. Vice-President Webb received the following reply from Governor Hill's military secretary: Your dispatch to Governor Hill is at hand. I am directed to say that General Farnsworth was sent to Syracuse to investigate the situation and report. It is desirable that official authentic information should be obtained before action is taken. You may rest assured that the State authorities will act promptly and vigorously in protecting property and preventing violence. The function of the military force should not be misunderstood, however. It is not their business to operate railroads or interfere in behalf of either party to the controversy, but only when invoked to act in aid of the local authorities in suppressing violence and protecting property. They are not expected to do mere police duty, and are not to discharge these functions which belong more properly to a sheriff's posse. The power of the civil authorities should be fully applied before resort is had to a military force. The governor desires that you keep him fully advised as to developments. (Signed) E. T. Judson, colonel and military secretary.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE

From San Francisco to the Tahiti and Marquesas Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The Oceanic Steamship Company has secured the mail contract from the French Government for service between San Francisco and the Tahiti and the Marquesas islands. The mail was heretofore carried by schooner. The new arrangement means considerable to San Francisco, as mails will be delivered every four weeks. The line will not be established, however, until the first of next year, as it will take the intervening time to get ready. The proposition is to have the Island steamers meet the Australian steamers to and from this city at Honolulu, so they will run on the same schedule as vessels between here and the colonies. The Oceanic Company has a new steamer now on the way from the Clyde to Honolulu which could be readily turned into the service. A member of the Oceanic Company this morning said the necessary appropriation for the service had been made by France.

FELL ONE THOUSAND FEET.

Parachute Jumper in Portland Dashed to Pieces—His Grip Failed Him.

PORTLAND, Aug 10.—Charles Cosgrove, an aeronaut, was instantly killed this afternoon at East Portland while making a parachute descent. Cosgrove ascended in a balloon from the Albina White house, and at the height of about 1000 feet, while over East Portland, the parachute was successfully loosened and Cosgrove for a short distance descended very rapidly. Soon the parachute filled and the speed was slackened.

When about 200 feet from the ground it is supposed Cosgrove's grip loosened, for suddenly he let go of the parachute and fell to the ground, striking the hard street in front of the First Presbyterian Church. He fell on his right shoulder and head, and death resulted almost instantly.

The body was mangled almost beyond recognition. Cosgrove was a man about 30 years of age, and had been in this city some time, working at different variety theatres. He made the ascension in place of Professor Roning, who was taken sick just before the ascension.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

AFFAIRS CONTINUE QUIET AT WELLINGTON.

Will the Canadian Mormons Corrupt the Indians?—Henry George in London—The Single Tax System Rooted in Australia—Gossip of the Metropolis.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Lord Dunraven has written a letter to Ben Titlet, the labor agitator and leader, stating he will be delighted to act as arbitrator in the Welsh miners' strike if both sides are entirely willing. As the masters are in a very angry frame of mind over the turn which their affairs have taken through the determination of the men, and the large amount of public sympathy which is being bestowed upon them. However, it is regarded as likely that they will refuse the offers of Lord Dunraven or any body else in the capacity of arbitrator, and continue to fight the strike.

London Notes.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Right Hon. William Edward Baxter, privy counsellor, formerly secretary to the admiralty and secretary to the treasury, is dead.

The King of Holland is in a feeble condition and is confined to his room, but alarmist reports current are without foundation.

Stanley has found time and inclination to talk about missionary prospects in Africa. He forsees trouble between the Protestants and Roman Catholics if the converts be not kept well in hand, but he has no fear of Mohammedanism in the future. That faith, he thinks, is fast decreasing, and he ventures to prophesy that within five years there will not be one Mohammedan south of the equator in Central Africa.

He also assigns that space of time for the completion of a railroad from the seaboard at Mombassa to Uganda in the interior.

The Duke of Cambridge, Queen Victoria's cousin, and Commander-in-chief of the British army, is honorary colonel of the Grenadier Guards, recently banished for insubordination, and, despite the adjective, draws the salary of about £1000 a year attached to the post. A daring Radical member of Parliament presumed to ask the secretary of war whether the royal duke was not responsible in some measure for the indiscipline of the regiment for commanding which he is so handsomely paid.

The secretary replied: "His Royal Highness, like all other honorary colonels, is in no way responsible for the discipline and efficiency of the regiment." A strong effort will now be made to have these sinecures abolished.

On Behalf of 500 Girls.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—John Burns, the well known labor agitator, has taken up the cudgels in behalf of five hundred young girls who have been locked out from the extensive chocolate works of Allan & Sons, in Bow. Although the highest wages received by any of them do not exceed three cents per hour, the trouble does not grow out of an application for an advance. The children are simply seeking for the abolition of disproportionate fines for trifling offences and of oppressive rules, such as being forbidden to leave the factory in their dinner hour, or to eat between eight and ten o'clock on Saturdays. A generous response to an appeal for funds in their behalf has been made by the trades unionists in the city.

Henry George in London.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Henry George made an address before the Land Restoration League last night. He gave an account of his tour in Australia. He said the single tax principle was deeply rooted there and that the cause was making great headway.

NEW WESTMINSTER.

Sons of England Picnicking—The Japanese Rioters Discharged.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 12.—The Sons of England picnic party, numbering about 300, left by the steamer Princess Louise this morning for Plumper's Pass.

The case of the Japanese rioters came up for hearing yesterday before Judge Bole, under the Speedy Trials Act. The counsel for defendants entered a plea of common assault, and the court considering the men had already received sufficient punishment, having been in custody for three months, discharged them with a caution.

The salmon run continues good and nearly all the cannery men who have their pack finished by the end of this week.

WELLINGTON NEWS.

There is no Change at Present in the State of Affairs.

Special to the TIMES.

NANAIMO, Aug. 12, 9 a. m.—All quiet. The procession of yesterday afternoon was quiet and orderly.

The steamer Wellington is hourly expected with about forty Italians to work in the mines. Telegrams have been received here from San Francisco by the union to that effect.

No objections will be made by the miners to the Italians going to work, and it is believed that time will show that the miners' battle is a just one.

The charges of intimidation, preferred against Joseph Carter and others of the union, by J. B. Hugo, came up for hearing before Judge Harrison, but were adjourned until Friday next, that Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., retained for the defence, may be present. Hon. C. E. Pooley, Q. C., is appearing for the prosecution.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Bishop Grandin Says the Mormons will Corrupt the Indians.

Special to the TIMES.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—Bishop Grandin, who is here on Government business, and who will likely await the return of Mr. Dewdney, says that while he has no personal knowledge of the Mormons at Lee Creek, in the Northwest, practising polygamy, he has no doubt but their presence, owing to their belief in polygamy, will be injurious to the morals of the Blackfeet Indians, who are to some extent believers in polygamy. They were weeding out polygamy from the belief of the Blackfeet Indians. Recently he had baptized seventeen of these Indians, but had not much confidence in them.

BIG SALMON RUN.

Reason Assigned by the Fishery Department at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—The Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries received a telegram from the Department officer at British Columbia saying that the run of salmon this year is one of a most extraordinary character, being fully equal to that of last year. Two thousand salmon were taken at the canneries on Saturday.

This year's run has upset all theories previously held in regard to salmon. Heretofore one good season has invariably been followed by two poor ones. Last season was the best the salmon canneries ever had and the total pack this year is as large.

The old rule will not apply. The only reason that is assigned for the increased run this year is that it is the effect of the good work done during the past four or five years at the Government fish hatchery.

CHANGING THE FLAG.

Formal Transfer of Heligoland to Germany—The Inhabitants Satisfied.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The transfer of the island of Heligoland to the German authorities was formally made to-day. The island was thronged to excess with visitors from an early hour in the morning. Upon the landing of the German officials her majesty's ship Calypso fired a salute. Minister van Boetticher was escorted through Underdorf up the steps to Oberland and the government house, where the formal transfer was made. Governor Barkeley read the clause in the Anglo-German agreement transferring Heligoland, and the German flag was hoisted beside the British standard amid a combined salute of twenty-one guns from the English and German vessels. Von Boetticher called for cheers for the kaiser. Von Boetticher escorted Governor Barkeley to the harbor, where the latter, at 4 o'clock, embarked on the warship Enchantress, amid combined salutes from the English and German fleets. Subsequently Von Boetticher gave a grand dinner at the kurhaus.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Newfoundland Matter Still Pending—Russia Denies Ill-Treatment of Jews.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—In the Commons this evening, Sir James Fergusson stated no arrangement had yet been made with the Newfoundland delegates. The modus vivendi in regard to the lobster fisheries, he said, would expire at the end of the present season.

Regarding the treatment of Jews in Russia, Sir James said that reports had been received from the British ambassador at St. Petersburg that the Russian Government emphatically denies the statements made by correspondents of the Times in recent dispatches from the Russian capital.

Replying to the criticisms of Turkey's dealings with Armenia, Sir James Fergusson regretted Schwann's unfortunate language, which, he said, was almost enough to excite the Armenians to rebellion. Admitting that Turkey had been acting with brutal cruelty, it was only just to say that she had acted much better in this case than in former times. It would be unjust to induce Turkey to suppose that a revolution was imminent.

Professor James Bryce said that the Government was keeping the House ignorant of events in Armenia. He hoped that the powers would unite in a stronger remonstrance to the Sultan.

GOING CRAZY.

Condemned Murderers Frightened out of Their Wits at Kemmler's Death.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Criminal lawyers may take a stand against the electrical execution law. Lawyer John R. Heinselmann, who defended the three murderers who are now awaiting execution, said to-day that he, like many others of his profession, believes that the killing of murderers by electricity is inhuman and horrible, and he will take immediate steps to have Governor Hill respite all murderers condemned to die by electricity until the legislature meets. Mr. Heinselmann said that his appeal would be in the shape of a petition, and that when the legislature meets he will ask permission to present a bill calling for the repeal of the law. He had investigated and found that many lawyers are bitterly opposed to the new law as cruel and inhuman. Mr. Heinselmann said that murderers awaiting execution are frightened out of their wits since they had heard of the horrible death of Kemmler, and it is believed by prison officers that one of the men will become crazy.

St. Swithen's day in England this year in England was so fine and warm as to cause comment in the English newspapers. The shade temperature at noon was, we are told, 70°, or 8° warmer than usual. A temperature of 64° even at midnight on the 15th of July would in Ontario be thought rather cool; the fact that it is normal July temperature at noonday sufficiently illustrates the difference in the warmth of Canadian and English summers.

The Root of Evil.

Dyspepsia and constipation are the sources of various diseases, but root and branch may be removed by using Burdock Blood Bitters according to directions. It is endorsed by the press, the public and the professions, and cannot be excelled for the cure of constipation, dyspepsia and all diseases arising therefrom.

THE UNIVERSITY MATCH.

The Rev. Thomas Baxter was a curate of the muscular, energetic type, which, fortunately for the church, is turned out not unfrequently by our universities and public schools. He was a big, broad shouldered young man, who, besides distinguishing himself greatly both on the river and in the cricket field, had taken a very respectable degree, for he was by no means afraid of hard work at any description. Such men often make capital parsons, and Tom was hardly less energetic in his parish work than he had been in very different spheres of action at Eaton and Oxford. But there were limits to Mr. Baxter's endurance; he liked an occasional holiday, and this was the only point upon which he and his vicar, the Rev. Septimus Straightway, were not entirely agreed.

The Rev. Septimus was an earnest man, and took a severe and gloomy view of the pleasures of life. He worked terribly hard in an East End parish; knew nothing and cared less about outdoor sports—or, in fact, about any form of amusement; and fully expected his curates to follow unhesitatingly in the extremely narrow and steep path up which he led them. Hence it came to pass that Mr. Straightway experienced considerable difficulty in finding curates after his own heart; the young men were continually leaving him for less arduous duties, and the vicar's opinion of human nature in general, and of the younger generation of curates in particular, steadily grew worse. In Tom Baxter, however, he really thought he possessed a treasure, and the danger of working a willing horse to death never so much as entered into his head.

Poor Tom did his very best to satisfy Mr. Straightway's requirements, for he really respected the man and valued immensely his good opinion, but, as has already been indicated, he could not help longing that his superior would enter a little more into his own harmless liking for occasional relief, and sympathize with his passion for rowing and all that was connected with athletics.

At the time I write of the cricket season was in full swing; but Tom's duties had not only prevented him from playing in a single match, but even from looking on at one for a few hours from the roof of the pavilion at Lord's. Moreover the university cricket match, in which he took an absorbing interest, was fast approaching, and he was sorely troubled by the dread that he might not be able to see it. This fear haunted him day and night; it worried him during his visiting and mission work, spoilt his rest, and occasionally obtruded itself upon him in the pulpit. Even the absent minded Mr. Straightway at length noticed that his curate's mind was ill at ease, and one day he went so far as to inquire the cause. Tom stammered out something about being out of sorts, and ventured to hint that he thought a day's holiday would do him good.

"When I was your age, Mr. Baxter, I never wanted a holiday," replied the austere vicar; "but you are certainly not looking well. Let me see, today is the 24th of June. In about a fortnight I think I can arrange a day for you. Say the 12th of July."

"Can't it be managed a week sooner?" queried Tom, desperately, for the university match was fixed for the 4th.

"Quite impossible, I fear," said the vicar, decisively, for he was a terrible martinet with his curates. So, with a wave of his hand, he dismissed the subject, and Tom knew that further appeal was useless.

"It's rather too bad," grumbled Mr. Baxter, as he walked home to his humble lodgings. "But it is no use talking to him about cricket; he doesn't know a bat from a ball." And with a heavy heart he tried to resign himself to the inevitable.

But two days later a circumstance occurred which entirely routed Tom's virtuous resolutions. A letter arrived at the reverend gentleman's lodgings which was couched in the following terms:

HEATHCOTE HALL, LANCASHIRE.

DEAREST TOM—We are actually coming to town. Only for two days, though; and we are going to Lord's to see the match. Uncle has got a drag there, block B. Of course I shall never forgive you if you don't come and see me; on Wednesday afternoon we go to Essex to stay with the Chilvertons, so this is our only chance of meeting. Do come; in terrible haste. Yours lovingly,

ALICE.

From the foregoing it may be gathered that Miss Alice Heathcote and Mr. Tom Baxter were on tolerably intimate terms. As a matter of fact they had been engaged for six months, during which time they had very rarely met. Baxter's people were well off, and he had a very rich uncle, among whose possessions was an excellent family living, destined in the future for Tom and his bride. But the uncle was a stern and conscientious gentleman, and he was determined, before he definitely agreed to give Tom the vacancy—when it occurred—to see what that young gentleman was made of. And this was why Baxter had been sent to help Mr. Straightway in the East End, why he worked so hard in the parish, and why he was so desperately anxious to stand high in his vicar's opinion.

When Tom read the letter his first impulse, unclerical though it may appear, was to use strong language. But he restrained himself and fell to thinking over the various means of escaping from his duties. A fresh appeal to Mr. Straightway he knew to be hopeless. That worthy ascetic did not only look upon cricket as a frivolous waste of time, but he was a strong advocate of the celibacy of the clergy. Moreover, by merely asking the question Tom might offend him, and this he certainly could not afford to do under the circumstances. There was nothing for it then but a pious fraud, and although Tom's conscience rebelled against the idea of deceiving his vicar, who trusted him implicitly, he could not make up his mind to disappoint Alice, or to deny himself the pleasure of seeing her. He might, under more favorable circumstances, have dined at her uncle's house in Portman square, but as luck would have it he had undertaken to conduct an evening class on both nights of her stay in town. So he wrote a very affectionate answer, promising that nothing short of an earthquake should prevent him from appearing at Lord's, and he at once set to work to arrange a plot for the deception of Mr. Straightway.

On the day before that on which he had promised to meet his intended Tom told his vicar that he was passing the night with a very old friend, who had just come home from India, in his rooms near Jermyn street. This, it must be said, was perfectly true, and of course Mr. Straightway could offer no valid objection, as Baxter had done all his work for the day. The next day, however, Tom slunk off to a telegraph office and in guilty haste dispatched a wire to the effect that he was suffering from a severe attack of lumbago, but would, if possible, return in the evening.

By 11 o'clock he was at Lord's. The mere sight of the ground was so welcome to him that he was determined to spend as much time there as he possibly could. He knew, of course, that he would be certain to meet any number of his old friends, and that the whole proceeding was extremely risky; but he consoled himself with the thought that, as Mr. Straightway rarely, if ever, went into society of any sort, he was not at all likely to hear anything about it. So he ensconced himself in the pavilion and awaited the beginning of the play with pleasurable impatience. The Heathcotes were all enthusiastic cricketers, and he counted on their appearance by 12 o'clock at the latest.

The match commenced in due course, but upon its varying fortunes it is not necessary to dwell. The Heathcotes also arrived, and Tom at once took up a position on the drag by the side of Miss Alice, the warmth of whose greeting speedily banished all fears and qualms of conscience from his breast. Nothing, in fact, could have been more perfect than Mr. Baxter's happiness up to the luncheon interval. His stentorian "well hit" or "well bowled" could be heard a hundred yards away; he clapped his hands, stamped and waved his hat like the veriest schoolboy, and meanwhile he was unremitting in his attention to the girl of his heart. Two o'clock struck. The bell rang for lunch, and the occupants of Mr. Heathcote's drag prepared for the substantial meal which forms so prominent a feature of the two great matches at Lord's. Tom by no means despised creature comforts. Mr. Straightway's curates were expected, at all events when with him and on duty, to follow their vicar's example in asceticism, so a good lunch was very acceptable to him. He had supplied Alice's wants, and was in the act of lifting to his mouth a piece of salmon, when suddenly he turned pale, his jaw fell, his eyes dilated, and the piece of salmon, accompanied by the fork, fell unheeded to the ground.

It was too true. Beside the very next drag, talking to a gentleman on the box seat, stood a tall, lean man, in clerical attire, whose figure was horribly familiar to the guilty curate. He could not be mistaken, it was Mr. Septimus Straightway, though what could have brought the reverend gentleman to Lord's was beyond Tom's imagination. The vicar had his back turned, and evidently did not suspect his curate's proximity. Instant flight was the only hope.

"Good gracious, Tom!" cried Miss Alice, "what on earth is the matter? You look as white as a sheet!"

"I don't feel very well, dear. Excuse me one minute," stammered Mr. Baxter. And he rose hurriedly, upsetting his plate, and jumped to the ground. Just as he reached terra firma he saw the clergyman shaking hands with his friend on the box seat; he was turning toward Mr. Heathcote's drag; in another second detection would follow. Tom glanced hurriedly round; the door of the drag was open and no one was looking. He accordingly plunged in head foremost, shut the door, and to make assurance doubly sure, pulled up the wooden blind. Then he breathed more freely. But what on earth would the Heathcotes think? A confederate was absolutely necessary. The Heathcotes' family butler, Mr. Binns, was an old friend of Tom's, and might be relied upon. Baxter espied Binns opening a bottle of champagne, and attracted his attention as noiselessly as possible.

"Binns!" he whispered, in great agitation, "please say to Miss Alice that I am not well, and that I have gone to take a walk, to bathe my head—say anything. Binns—but for mercy's sake don't let her know that I'm in here. Don't let anybody know. You won't, will you?" he continued, piteously.

Mr. Binns thought that Tom was off his head, but his impassive face betrayed no surprise.

"Certainly, sir. Any other message?"

"No! that will do—and, Binns, come back here at once; I want you to do something else."

"Yessir."

The message caused some little surprise and much sympathy.

"Poor fellow!" said Miss Alice; "it all comes from working so hard in those terrible slums, and never taking a holiday."

When Binns returned Tom asked him in the same agitated whisper:

"Did you notice a tall, thin gentleman—a clergyman—standing beside the next drag just now?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you see him now?"

"Yes, sir," said Binns; also whispering, "he's a-standing close by."

"Good gracious!" murmured Tom. "Look here, come and tell me when he's gone."

And Tom pulled up the other wooden blind half way, and cowered on the floor among the cushions and dust cloaks. It was terribly hot and stuffy, but he dared not move until Binns returned, and that personage was absent for no less than half an hour by Tom's watch. The captive was growing desperate, when at last a welcome face appeared at the window above the blind.

"Mr. Baxter, sir," whispered Binns, "the clerical gent, sir; he's on the roof of our drag."

"You don't say so!" groaned Tom.

"He is, indeed, sir. He and master seems very thick; they're talking over old Cambridge times. I never waited on him before, sir."

"Of course," said the curate in despair. "I see it now. Old Septimus was at Cambridge, so was Heathcote; they are old friends. How in the name of Providence am I to get out of this? I say, Binns, do you know I must stop here till he goes. You will keep it dark—now won't you?"

"Most certainly, sir," said the sympathetic butler. "Won't you have some lunch, sir? Nobody will know."

Tom smiled in his misery at the idea. After all, why shouldn't he?

"Well, Binns, I really think I will."

And the trusty servitor disappeared to return with a huge plateful of cold pie, a bottle of champagne and some strawberries.

"Thank ye, Binns," same Tom, gratefully; "now go away and don't come back till the clergyman has gone. Whew! How hot it is!"

It was hot and no mistake. On a scorching day the interior of a drag with the windows shut is about as agreeable a resting place as the Black Hole. Tom could not let the blinds down, so he drank a tumbler of iced champagne, which made him much warmer than before, though it inspired him to smile at his position. His stiff collar was growing limp, and his heavy black garments began to grow insupportable.

"Wonder if I dare to take my coat off?" he asked himself. The mental answer was "Yes," and he proceeded to do so. Then he felt better, finished the plate of pie, and had another tumbler of the champagne. "I feel half inclined to go out and face him," reflected Tom, but his heart failed. He piled the dust cloaks, coats and umbrellas in one corner, and tried to make himself comfortable. Presently, however, the match was resumed, and then his real suffering began. Tom had never endured such torture. Loud applause frequently broke upon his ears; shouts of "Well hit!" "Well bowled!" "Well caught!" and, sometimes, more maddening even than these sounds, there was a deep hush of suspense in the noisy crowd, or a distinctly audible sigh of relief, which told his practiced ears that some exciting crisis of the game had come or gone.

He vainly peered over the half drawn blind to catch a glimpse of the players; he could, however, see nothing but a forest of black hats and variegated sunshades. Binns returned not—Tom dared not quit his hiding place, and despair once more possessed his soul. "Suppose I'm here for the afternoon. Holy Moses, how appallingly hot it is!" (Heat is apt to relax the propriety even of a curate's language.) "Wish I dared to take some more of my clothes off!" And then his eye fell on the champagne bottle, which was nearly half full. "Well, I can have another drink, at all events!" And again his troubles seemed less. He stretched himself out as well as he could, for he was a big man and the space was small, and by degrees he finished the bottle. "If only I had a weed," he reflected; "haven't smoked for months, it seems years."

And growing bold even to recklessness, he hunted in the pockets of the other men's overcoats till he found a cigar case. When he had lit a cigar he felt comparatively at ease. It was very hot, he thought, but a peaceful feeling stole over him; the hum of the crowd grew fainter and fainter; the shouts of applause more distant; even the hammering of sticks and umbrellas on the drag, within six inches of his head, ceased to annoy him. He pulled at his cigar less energetically; soon it fell from his lips, and the Rev. Thomas Baxter slept as peacefully as a child.

He was awakened by a rough shake and shout in his ear of "Hi, wake up!" Returning to semi-consciousness he indistinctly heard exclamations of "Shameful!" "Disgusting!" "Who would have thought it?" And then a familiar voice said in somewhat quavering accents, "Leave him to me, papa. I must see him alone." Tom pulled himself together with a jerk, opened his heavy eyes, and found himself confronted by Miss Alice Heathcote, who stood with flushed cheeks and indignant expression at the door of the drag.

"Are you awake, sir?" she inquired, with elaborate sternness.

"Awake! yes; why not, dear?" stammered Mr. Baxter.

"Then what is the meaning of this? You leave me hours ago and say you don't feel well, and here I find you sound asleep when the play is over for the day, and we have been sending all over the ground for you. And in your shirt sleeves, too!"

"Good gracious! I beg your pardon. I forgot." And, blushing scarlet, the curate huddled on his coat.

"And they all say that you are drunk," she continued, with a half sob. "Oh, Tom, it's shameful!"

"Drunk!" cried Mr. Baxter, indignantly. "I should like to meet anybody who says that I'm drunk! Let me explain, darling. I'll come out now." And then he caught sight of his vicar again and shrank back. "Is that man never going?"

"What man?" asked Miss Alice, with impatience. "Really, Tom, you must be mad today."

"Why, the clergyman, Alice, dear; do you know who he is?"

"Of course I do; it's Mr. Grayson, a vicar somewhere in Yorkshire, an old college friend of papa's; they haven't met for twenty years. I'm sure he's not an alarming person—in fact, the only strange thing about him is that about twenty people have mistaken him for your man—Mr. Straightway, you know. Are they at all alike?"

"Yes, they are—rather," gasped Tom, scarcely knowing whether he stood on his head or heels. "Come and introduce him to me, darling. I'll make it all right with your father."

And he did; but it will be some time before he hears the last of that cricket match.—London Truth.

A boiler head in the dye house of Henry Wing, of Chicago, blew out and scattered a box of pins standing near with such force that Mr. Wing was literally stuck full of them. He will recover.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN CLUB.

JACK GIVES A GRAND DINNER PARTY TO THE BOYS.

A Cow With an Armor-Clad Hide Used as Beef—Jack Says He Shot a Mountain Goat—The Judge Really Shoots a Skunk, but Does Not Bring It Home.

XXVIII.

When Jack had rashly asked the boys to dinner, the secretary came to him with a very long face. He was alone.

"Jack, how on earth are you going to manage it? There's not an empty place in the whole camp, and you can't crowd the whole lot into this little hole."

"Then we'll spread the little hole out until it covers them."

"What do you mean?"

"Knock out a wall or two, and clap on more house, stupid."

"Bosh! But Jack, seriously there's scarcely any grub left in the whole camp, and if these snow slides block up the road much longer we'll be getting hungry."

"All right, old boy. Get Mackie to go down with you to head quarters, take a couple of saddle horses and two more to pack, buy up all the decent provisions and liquor you can carry, and I guess one of you will be sure to get back alive with decent precautions and a moderate amount of luck. I'll give you all the money you want, and you can give I. O. U's for the rest. Now, that's settled."

"Hump. Well, how about meat?"

"My dear young friend, are not the mountains round us a very butcher shop with meat on every peg? Doth not the mountain mutton tumble down the highest precipices for his daily bread, and rebound like a boomerang when his horns ring loud upon the rocks beneath? Doth not the goat's flesh wag its tail and show off upon the needle pointed summits of these alps? Doth not the savory venison get tangled up it the brush, and get his teeth stuck accidentally in the pine gum? And failing all these, my son, have we not the cow with the armour-clad hide that cometh from Chicago, Illinois, and is kept for many long years by the Hudson's Bay Company and sold in its desolate old age to some unscrupulous trader, with yet its battle-proof carcase sarcastically branded "fresh!" Tom, you're behind the times. We live in an artificial age. Formerly men lived upon the treasure of the garden, the pasture, the wheat field and the sea. We know better; our food comes out of a can. It is but a revival. There's nothing new under the sun. Our mineral lodes are but the metamorphosed deposits of antediluvian camps. The potted lobster, the preserved ham and chicken of the immemorial past have their monuments in the metalliferous deposits of to-day. Yea, and in the far future the prospector will discover vast lodes of beef and coal oil cans; and he will register a claim; and the mining expert will report it unequalled; and the mining speculator will get rich upon the handling of stock, and the widows and orphans of the period will be roped in in the old time-honored way. Enter my son on the paths of science and you will acquire more credulity, and dogmas, and Latin words, and ingenuity, and untruthfulness generally, than you have as yet any conception of." At this point I touched Jack upon the arm and he consented to come down.

All my difficulties were broached in turn, and dismissed by Jack with sublime contempt. He swept away all remonstrance, all chaff, all opposition. In the course of the week two wings were added to the shanty and the whole interior thrown into one room, the floor was relaid, fresh furniture added, and trestles and benches borrowed for the dinner. Mackie and Tom were away four days and had some very risky encounters with snow slides. Mackie's saddle horse was actually carried away and lost, and himself badly bruised against a tree in escaping. However, we did get the provisions, and curiously enough many of the things Jack ordered, while they were capital supplies for regular shanty keeping, were very curious additions to a banquet—scouring soap and candles, especially. As to the hunting the "butcher shop" did not yield all that Jack hoped for, but the Imitation Cowboy shot a tender young dear, which will soon be a monster grizzly if he goes on telling about it at the present rate. Jack shot a mountain sheep, he says, but lost it over a cliff. The Judge killed a skunk within a hundred yards from the shanty, and claimed it was delicious eating and should be added to the banquet. The rest of the boys swore that if it were served up the Judge should be made to eat it, whereupon the Judge left it by the wayside and went on. Where the venison came from that had the place of honor at table is not definitely known, but it is supposed that Jack bought it from an Indian.

There never was such a dinner. All the boys were there without exception, and everyone did his very best to add to the fun. Many toasts were celebrated in punch—upon the Judge's own secret, and most mysterious and nasty prescription—many songs were sung, including the "Gold Miner," by special request. Verily there never was such a dinner. We shall have to begin another chapter about it.

"COME, LET US REASON TOGETHER."

Rumor, as we quite well understand, affords but a flimsy foundation upon which to rear the structure of an argument. Certain situations, however, admit of certain inferences, and hence with respect to the rumor that Messrs. DUNSMUIR would, were it practicable, undertake to operate their coal mines with Chinese labor, we incline to accept it as having a modicum of truth. Having made up their minds that labor organizations are inimical to coal mining, the Messrs. DUNSMUIR not unnaturally desire to secure a class of labor which is pliable, and which may be controlled without that fine regard for the equities which is now the bone of contention between capital and labor. Fortunately the Chinese are not to be had. We say fortunately, because aside from the unpopularity the exclusive employment of Chinese would bring, there is the likelihood of disastrous consequences in the matter of accidents. Ignorant of the first principles of the dangerous character of the occupation of coal mining and constitutionally careless, the employment of Chinese would invite disaster, not only to themselves but to their employers. But let this feature pass. If the Messrs. DUNSMUIR prefer the dangerous alternative of employing Chinese to white men, that is their undoubted privilege. We may say, however, that if we were maliciously inclined we should approve of the employment of Chinese in coal mines, for in such an event injury must result to the owners, and further, we should feel assured of legislative action of a character so drastic as to make the employment of Chinese impossible except in the domestic vocations. But we are not malicious. We are not of the kind who can look complacently on while men hang themselves with the plentitude of rope which fortune has given them. We desire to see all men prosper, and in this instance the prosperity of the Messrs. DUNSMUIR is synonymous with the prosperity of the Province.

But as to the character of labor the Messrs. DUNSMUIR may choose to employ that is but a side issue. It is the principle of labor organization which is at stake, and we may say that it is a principle which is bound ultimately to command the fullest recognition. To save trouble capital should recognize it at once. With the precedent of the French revolution fresh in mind; with the warnings of the first intellects in Europe and America filling the periodical and the daily press, capital would do well to heed it, for unless some basis of agreement can be reached there will be an explosion which will shake the institutions of the country to their centre. The necessity of the recognition of labor as a force which has the right to protect itself against rapacity by organization if need be, lies in the fact that the greater proportion of questions affecting industrial interests do not admit of solution by legislative enactment.

Even if legislatures had no axes to grind, were actuated by an honest desire to harmonize the differences inevitable of two forces in society, each wanting the best of the bargain, they could scarcely attain that end. The interests of capital and labor are not harmonizable by any hard-and-fast rules. Legislation may indeed prohibit the importation of alien labor; it may impose restrictions with regard to the employment of incompetent persons as to certain vocations; it may equalize the burdens of taxation; it may indeed correct many abuses which have grown out of the worship of the "golden calf," but when legislation undertakes to deal with the law of supply and demand; when it undertakes to regulate the hours of labor it deals with a boomerang, that is to say, the promulgation of such laws as likely as not will prove as disadvantageous to labor as to capital. The law, however, can do this: It can legalize the consolidation of industrial interests whether they represent capital or labor, and it can compel arbitration in all matters in respect to which negotiation has failed. Aside from features of this description legislation is worthless. We would not give a rush for all the legislation that might be conjured up which attempts to deal with mulcting quantities, and with conditions which are largely the result of circumstances. The key to the solution of the differences which arise between capital and labor is Fairness, the disposition to live and let live. When two men approach each other in this spirit a settlement of the question at issue is always reached. It is a nice point to settle—what is fair and what is not,—but it is not beyond the scope of arbitration. It is to be hoped that capital will so far appreciate the gravity of the situation as to say to labor: "Come, let us reason together."

GOVERNOR HILL'S OPINION.

In the matter of the strike in New York and the call for troops by Vice President WEBB, we have in the reply of Governor HILL a bit of sentiment which our magistrates, the Government and the Colonist would do well to frame and hang up in their respective offices. Governor HILL informs the railway officials that while they shall be protected by armed men if necessary, the function of a military force should not be misunderstood. They are not to perform duties which properly belong to a sheriff's posse. Not until the power of the civil authorities has been fully applied should resort be had to a military force. Now the laws regulating to the calling out of troops are essentially the same of both Canada and the United States. In each country the military force is the force of last resort. Not until the civil forces have been tried and are found wanting may the military force be legally employed. But was the civil force applied at Wellington? Did the civil force make any arrests previous to the call for troops? It appears not. We affect to depreciate the mercurial disposition of the Americans and in the matter of their propensity for violence, we with the unction of "Holy Willies" point morals to adorn tales, but just so soon as the slightest symptom of anarchy is manifest we proceed to unlash the dogs of war. In the event of any real trouble in this province the panic which would overtake the authorities would be a little short of pitiable.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Colonist flies into a rage because we put a wrong construction on a statement which recently appeared in that paper relative to the locking up of the provincial lands during the absence of Mr. VERNON in Europe. If, as the Colonist explains, Mr. VERNON left a deputy, why did its scribe say that the lands were locked up? If Mr. VERNON left a deputy, why did not the Colonist say so? How should we know that the statement was not a Colonistic euphonism made with the view of delicately conveying to its readers Mr. VERNON'S determination that in the event of the Government's changing their land policy during his absence it would avail them nothing. Conceive of the chagrin of Mr. VERNON to find on his return from his outing that all the land in the province was sold, and that he was left with nothing to do but to superintend the building of bridges and culverts. The Colonist, we hope, will be more careful in the future in the choice of its language. It cannot expect us to interpret it as we would a Dutchman, not by what it says but by what it means. The Colonist concludes its tirade by saying that our twaddle would disgrace the News-Advertiser. We can stand such a comparison as this, so long as the Colonist does not compare us to the World, the Truth and Sentinel we shall not feel especially degraded.

The wheat crop in Europe, save in Austria and the Danube valley, will be poor this year. In England, France and Germany wet weather has prevailed to such an extent as to make a small crop certain, while in Russia it is doubtful whether the yield will be up to the average. In India the official figures for 1890 give the crop at 6,382,000 tons, against 6,510,000 in 1889 and 7,143,000 tons in 1888. On these figures it is estimated that the export of wheat from India to Europe will be about 650,000 quarters less than last year, and nearly 1,000,000 quarters less than two years ago. In the United States the winter wheat crop is reported short by from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels, but this only affects the states between Ohio and Nebraska. From Wisconsin westward along the same parallel there is loss on the corn crop of not less than 100,000,000 bushels and may be two or three times this estimate. The hay crop is reduced in many quarters. The apple crop is reduced in New York state; the grapes are rotting on the Hudson and the peach crop of Deleware and Maryland is almost destroyed. The demand for wheat in Europe means a higher average price for wheat in our market than has ruled during the past twelve months. Poor crops of fruit at the east; poor crops of wheat and corn from Ohio to Nebraska mean heavy losses to the farmer, while high priced wheat means to a vast number of our people high priced flour.

KEMMLER literature has not yet had its day. The press is still full of it and we discover from its perusal that considerable difference of opinion exists as to whether electrocution is a failure or not.

Says the Astoria Columbian: "The relaxation of a few muscles in Kemmler's worthless carcass has thrilled the effete East with horror. The newspapers refer to the few spasmodic twitchings which followed the powerful electric current as the "horrifying details" of the execution. The popular voice is raised against such shocking inhumanity and such unfeeling brutality. Formerly a Southern murderer was severed from his body by a rope, when a Nevada murderess dress was covered with blood, spouting in torrents from arteries ruptured by the noose, and when an Iowa murderer's neck broke three ropes before he was successfully (?) executed, the press of the country mentioned the matter as "an unfortunate occurrence," and the more enlightened were satisfied with the explanation that the hangman did not know his business."

We should dislike to be thought unfeeling, but the memory refreshed with the foregoing instances of the failure of the rope to do its work thoroughly, leaves us no alternative but to assume that it is yet to be proved that hanging is preferable to electrocution. All experience goes to show that a shock of electricity, though not powerful enough to kill, is less painful than the shock resultant on the sudden fetching up at the end of a rope. Unless, under such circumstances the neck is broken, the senses remain active; whereas, in the case of an electrical shock insensibility follows, though death may not actually intervene. Decidedly, comparing the case of KEMMLER with the not unusual botch work attending executions by hanging, electrocution has the advantage of being the most merciful.

Reports have it that murderers awaiting execution are frightened out of their wits at the prospect of being electrocuted. If fright of this kind could be made to overtake parties who are contemplating murder an object is gained which should not be abandoned upon the strength of sentimental considerations. That we regard electrocution a success we are not prepared to say. If, however, the prospect of being Kemmlerized is more repugnant to the criminally minded than that of being hanged, the legislature of New York will do well to ignore any demand for the repeal of the law providing for the carrying out of the death penalty by electricity.

LORD MONCK.

TO THE EDITOR.—Could you inform me through the columns of your paper if Lord Monck was the first Governor-General of Canada after confederation? Did he serve the full term of office and if not what was the cause?

SUBSCRIBER.

[Lord Monck was appointed Governor of Canada (Upper and Lower Canada) on the 28th October, 1861, and held that post until confederation, 1866. When the question of confederation was being discussed, his term was extended for two years, in order that that great scheme might be inaugurated under his regime. That time having expired, Lord Monck retired in 1868. He was thus the first Governor-General of the Dominion, although six of the seven or eight years' service were as Governor previous to confederation.—ED. TIMES.]

THE S. S. PORTIA'S ESCAPE.

A Huge Iceberg Collapses and the Vessel is Lifted out of the Sea.

The steamer Portia, Capt. Ash, which arrived at St. Johns', Nfld., had a very narrow escape from destruction on her way from Pilley's island on the 20th of July. When near Fago Head a huge iceberg was noticed dead ahead. The steamer sailed close alongside of it, and while passing the glittering mass a terrific report was heard, which shook the ship. The monstrous berg suddenly broke in three pieces, each piece going under the water with a roar and crash like thunder. The steamer shot on the bottom of the third piece, which tipped over, holding her for a while, clear out of the water. For a time it looked to all on board as though sudden death was inevitable, but in a moment the sea, which had hitherto been as placid as a mill pond, suddenly became a surging mass. This driving sea rushed down upon the Portia and lifted her off the ice into the water. On examining the ship it was found that the stanchions in the saloon had been displaced and bent and the under girders of the dining table smashed. Capt. Ash was at his post on the bridge at the time of the accident. After the report he saw a third of the berg tip over and a portion of it slowly rise from the water. The engines were stopped. Had this order not been promptly executed the steamer would have gone down when lifted from the ice by the seas. The excitement among the passengers was intense. The captain and chief officers shouted to the passengers to keep cool. The terrified passengers grew calmer, and almost immediately after the Portia was in clear water and out of danger. The bow of the ship was damaged by ice, and a portion of the forward apartment was flooded. The passengers speak in high terms of the coolness and judgment displayed by Captain Ash. This presence of mind during danger is what would naturally be expected from a man who took such a prominent part in the Greely relief expedition. The passengers presented Captain Ash with an address. Mr. Northcote, the chief officer was in his berth when the iceberg broke. He informed a reporter to-day that he was startled by lumps of ice coming through the port-hole into his appartments.

CARDINAL NEWMAN DEAD.

A Short Sketch of the Life of a Most Eminent Man.

A cablegram announces the death, in his 90th year, of His Eminence Cardinal John Henry Newman, one of the most eminent scholars and illustrious divines of the present day. When a student at Oxford and during his career as a clergyman of the Church of England, he highly distinguished himself by his intellectual powers and logical grip upon things scientific and religious. But in 1843 he became associated with Dr. Pusey as the recognized leader of the High Church party, being one of the principal contributors to the well-known "Tracts for the Times," which were declared to have annulled the broad lines of demarcation between the Roman Catholic and English Churches. Prior to this he had been regarded as having predilections in favor of the Low, or rather the Broad Church party; but almost at a bound he, by a remarkable course of sermons and lectures at Oxford, as well as by his contributions to the Hymnology of the English Church, rose to that joint leadership of the party which Rev. Dr. Pusey had that far directed. As a step preliminary to his final separation from the Anglican communion he established an ascetic community at Littlemore, over which he presided for three or four years. In 1845 he made his final break, being received into the Roman Catholic Church; nine years later being appointed Rector of the Catholic University in Dublin, a position which he resigned in 1858 to establish a school for the sons of Roman Catholic gentry near Birmingham. Contrary to the general expectation he was a strong believer in the doctrine of Papal infallibility, and in 1879 was proclaimed a Cardinal Deacon by Pope Leo XIII. But for his age he would, no doubt, have become a more prominent figure in the church of his adoption, albeit in his sermons and controversial writings, together with his poems—among the latter of which was the beautiful and pathetic, "Lead Kindly Light"—he maintained the high rank to which he was entitled. On apologetics he was a master authority, and whether by Catholics or Protestants—laymen or clerics—was universally held in the highest regard. He was ever a warm personal friend of Hon. Mr. Gladstone, Cardinal Manning, Dr. Pusey and the late Cardinal Wiseman, Archbishop Whately, Bishop Wilberforce, R. C. Bishop Ullathorne and many of the prominent characters of his day in the ecclesiastical, literary, and political world. His death, though for a long time expected, will be heard of with much sorrow by all who are in any way acquainted with his grand and pathetic writings, both in prose and poetry.

Dr. Newman was created and proclaimed a Cardinal Deacon by Pope Leo XII in 1879. His Eminence has written "Lectures on Romanism and Popular Protestantism," 1837; "Letter to J. Faussett on certain Points of Faith," 1838; "Parochial Sermons," 8 vols., 1838-45; "Lectures on Justification," 1840; "Church of the Fathers," 1840; "Essay on the Miracles of the Middle Ages," 1843; "Annotated translation of St. Athanasius," 1842-44; "Sermons on the Subjects of the Day," 1844; "Sermons on Theory of Religious Belief," 1844; "Development of Christian Doctrine," 1846; "Discourses addressed to Mixed Congregations," 1850; "Life of Apollonius Tyaneus," 1824; "Loss and Gain, or the Story of a Convert," 1848; "Lectures on the History of the Turks as to Christianity," 1854; "Arians of the Fourth Century," "Callista, Sketch of the Third Century," "Discourses on the Nature of Universities," and essays on the "Office and Work of Universities," in 1854-56; "Sermons Preached on Various Occasions," 1857; "Lectures and Essays on University Subjects," 1859, and "Letter to Dr. Pusey on his recent Eirenicon," 1866. He published an autobiographical record of his life, entitled "Apologia pro Vita Sua," in 1864; a "Collection of Poems," in 1868; an "Essay on Assent," in 1870; and "A Letter addressed to His Grace the Duke of Norfolk, on the occasion of Mr. Gladstone's recent Expostulation," 1875.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—During the greater part of yesterday Cardinal Newman was in a semi-conscious state, frequently falling into a dose. About one hour before the end, the Cardinal asked to see Father Neville, his secretary, whose hand he grasped as he smiled and murmered, "I hear music in heaven; all is sunshine."

Several priests at the bedside were moved to tears at the scene. The body of the cardinal will lie in state till Saturday, when it will be interred in Rednal cemetery. He preached his last sermon on January 1st. All the morning papers print eulogistic of the dead cardinal.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

The Ex-Convict and Gifted Poet's Sad Death in Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—John Boyle O'Reilly, the poet and editor of the Boston Pilot, died this afternoon. Death is supposed to have been caused by an overdose of chloroform, taken for insomnia.

O'Reilly had been suffering for several days from insomnia. During the past week he had slept but little. Last night his wife was ill, and he called Dr. Litchfield to attend her. The doctor went to the house and prescribed for her, leaving a bottle of medicine. At 3 o'clock this morning O'Reilly again called the doctor, and said that part of the medicine left for Mrs. O'Reilly had been spilled. The doctor then gave him a single dose to take to her. As he left the doctor's, O'Reilly said he felt extremely tired, and if Mrs. O'Reilly went to sleep he would take a little something himself to see if he could not get a few hours' sleep.

At 4 o'clock Mrs. O'Reilly awoke and found her husband missing. She went down stairs and found him lying on the floor in an unconscious condition. A doctor was immediately called, but O'Reilly expired in a short time. It is thought he must have taken a dose of chloral to make him sleep, and took an overdose. Mrs. O'Reilly and her four daughters are nearly prostrated with grief.

J. Boyle O'Reilly was born at Dowth Castle, County Meath, Ireland, in 1844. His history is very creditable. At the age of fourteen he learned type setting, and afterward became a reporter for various English journals. He returned to Ireland in 1863 and enlisted in the 10th Hussars. He had meantime joined the Fenian society; and his entrance into the English army was with the object of spreading disaffection among the Irish soldiers. His connection with Fenianism was discovered in 1866. His propaganda of revolutionary principles had been successful, and several Irish regiments, known to be ready to participate in a rebellion, were, in consequence, scattered through the most unhealthful parts of the British possessions. O'Reilly was tried for high treason, and sentenced to be shot. The sentence was commuted, and he was confined in different English prisons. When in Dartmoor, aided by other Irish prisoners, he collected and buried the scattered bones of the French and American prisoners of war who were shot in 1814. In 1867 he was sent to Australia. He was one of those excluded from the amnesty granted to the political prisoners in 1869. He escaped from the western coast of Australia in an open boat, was picked up by Capt. Gifford, of the American ship "Gazelle," and landed in Philadelphia on 23rd Nov., 1869. He lectured and wrote for the journals for a time, followed the Fenian raid into Canada in 1870, and described its incidents for the Boston journals. The same year he became connected with the Boston "Pilot," of which he was, up to the time of his decease, editor and principal owner. He founded the Papyrus club in Boston. He has appeared as a lecturer, has contributed to periodicals, and has published in book form "Songs of the Southern Seas" (Boston, 1873); "Songs, Legends and Ballads" (1878); "Moondyne," a novel (1879); "Statues in the Block" (1881); and "In Bohemia" (1886).

COLONEL POWELL.

Acting General of the Canadian Militia, vice General Middleton.

Since the resignation of Major-General Sir Frederick Middleton, late commander of the Canadian Militia, Col. Walker Powell, the adjutant-general, has been in command. This gentleman has been connected with the Canadian militia for many years. If the Canadian law requiring that the commander of the militia shall be a British army officer is repealed, as it is likely to be next session, Col. Powell will probably be the first Canadian appointed to the generalship. In appearance the acting general is tall and stout, with a soldierly bearing, a frank, open countenance, prominent forehead and a prepossessing appearance. Colonel Powell was born on the 20th of May, 1828. He received his education at Victoria College, Cobourg, Ont., and was first appointed an officer of the Norfolk regiment of militia on the 14th December, 1847. On the 19th August, 1862, and before confederation, he was appointed deputy adjutant general for Upper Canada. On the 1st October, 1868, Col. Powell was made deputy adjutant general for the Dominion, and on the 25th April, 1875, he became adjutant general. For more than 26 years, therefore, Col. Powell has been busy at headquarters aiding in the development of the existing militia system.

In 1862, when he joined the department, there were no Canadian regulations relating to the militia force. At that time the Imperial troops were stationed in the country, and the militia force of Canada acted as an auxiliary. Since that time, however, largely owing to Col. Powell's exertions, a complete set of regulations have been prepared to enable the militia to act as a separate organization, the Imperial troops having been withdrawn. In order to carry out the objects of the organization more fully, the Kingston Royal Military College has been founded, and nine military schools have been established at various points in the country. The Imperial Government offers four commissions in the regular troops to cadets from the military college, and the latter are very highly valued on account of their training as engineers. In 1885 the responsibility rested upon the shoulders of Col. Powell as adjutant general, of sending out troops to quell the half-breed rebellion. At that time he was the only staff officer at headquarters, and discharged his onerous duties with marked ability, showing great judgment and a perfect knowledge of the requirements of the case.

The total strength of the Dominion militia, over which Col. Powell is placed as one of the heads, is 36,783 men, divided up as follows: Cavalry, 1,944; field artillery, 1,440; garrison artillery, 1,023; engineers, 179; infantry, 31,297. These are all trained and accustomed to act in concert. In addition to these the permanent corps numbers 950 men. The Canadian militia system although independent of the Imperial army regulations, does not prevent the militia from operating with the regulars. They are a great aid in managing the existing force, and are in fact indispensible.

London's Streets.

The following item taken from the London Graphic shows that the streets in that big city are worse than they are in Victoria. "For the lover of horses it is sad to walk along the streets in such weather as we experience during a large portion of the year, and see the miseries endured by the patient beasts who serve us so faithfully. At all times they do not find it an easy matter to keep their feet, owing to the constant change of roadway which our beautiful system—or want of system—of London government has permitted. Now they are on wood, the next moment on asphalte, and soon again on granite, to say nothing of the macadam which is still to be found here and there. In very wet or very dry weather they may manage fairly enough, but when drizzle or dew, or the Vestry's watering carts, have just moistened the surface, then it is that our streets become mere death traps for our horses. Particularly is this the case on the crowded line between Charing Cross and Liverpool Street."

Flogging at Eton.

The English Illustrated Magazine says: Beyond the head master's desk in the upper school is a smaller room, still called the library, although no longer stored with books. Here, in extreme cases, flogging is administered by the head master, none of the assistants being empowered to inflict corporal punishment. The victim, kneeling on a wooden step, called the "block," is "held down" by two junior collegers, and a senior colleger hands to the master the necessary birch or birches. A former block was destroyed during a rebellion in the year 1878, and fragments of it were distributed as trophies among the boys concerned. Its successor was cleverly carried away by the late Lord Waterford and two other old Etonians in 1836, and it is now preserved at Curraghmore as a historical relic. Flogging was for many generations the normal punishment for almost all offenses, great or small, for serious breaches of discipline and for mistakes in Latin construing. Many amusing stories—some of them true, more of them apocryphal—are told of Dr. Keate and the vigorous manner in which he wielded the birch, and it is remembered that he suppressed an attempted rebellion by successively flogging more than eighty boys in the middle of a summer night in 1832. Since his time there has been a gradual decrease in the number of floggings administered by subsequent head masters, and Dr. Warre seldom resorts to this form of punishment.

REVELSTOKE RIPPLES.

A Few Interesting Items Clipped from the Kootenay Star.

Judge Tunstall has received notice from the Government at Victoria that the appropriation available for West Kootenay was but $10,000, instead of $12,000 as had been heretofore believed. This is exceedingly unfortunate, for the reason that improvements had been authorized and work commenced on the basis of an expenditure of $12,000. [illegible] information received from Col. Baker.

We are now enjoying a most delightful rain. It commenced with heavy hail about noon, Saturday, and has made things cool and pleasant again.

The Kootenay arrived at Sproat about 11 o'clock Saturday forenoon with a caboose, two flat cars and a big load of steel rails.

Mr. Harold Redgrave, who has been filling the responsible position of Provincial constable and mining recorder since Constable Kirkup was transferred to Sproat, has accepted a transfer to Donald, and left for his new field of duty last Sunday morning. He has performed the functions of office whilst here with much intelligence and satisfaction.

Miners who have just returned from Trail creek, and have brought some very good specimens with them. One wash-up in a wash basin of about two handsful of decomposed quartz, and the yield was over 30 cents. Some of the ledges carry a large amount of this matter and rich sulphurets.

Two miners have staked three or four claims at Trail creek, and from all reports of experienced men this is likely to be one of the richest finds in British Columbia. There are about 25 men in at present, and many more going down soon.

ALASKA NEWS.

An Interesting Batch of Mining and Other News.

[Juneau Mining Record.]

Early in the spring Levi Harrod left Juneau to prospect a section of country lying between Observatory Inlet and Naas river, in the British possessions near the southern boundary of Alaska. He reports the country traversed by him as being of a slate formation with every indication of gold. He prospected up one stream emptying into the inlet for a distance of fifty miles and found gold along its banks but not in sufficient quantities to pay to work. He reports it as a most difficult section in which to prospect on account of not being able to take in supplies sufficient to last during the season, hence he was compelled to return before he had finished his explorations. There is a section of country lying between Stickeen and Naas rivers which has never been prospected and of which we have heard prospectors say few if any men have ever been over it and all express an opinion that it is an excellent field for the prospector and that when it is penetrated by expert miners its richness will be revealed. Surrounding this particular locality rich strikes have been made and before many years this section will be looked over thoroughly.

Last week Mr. Venator with a working force went to Shuck to commence operations on some placer ground recently purchased by a party of Juneau gentlemen, mention of which was made some weeks ago in the Mining Record. We are pleased to observe that mining men are devoting more interest and time in looking for placer diggings and it is a safe presumption to say that there are many valuable placers in this section but as yet undiscovered.

Juneau at present presents a very quiet appearance, there being a large number of our residents out in the mountains prospecting.

Mr. Bernhardt went below on the Queen and will return in about three weeks. He goes below on business connected with mining.

The Nowell company shipped a number of sacks of ore on the Topeka to the Tacoma smelter. This ore came from their basin properties and is pronounced by experienced miners as being first class. It is galena ore and runs quite high in gold.

A report reaches here that J.J. Healy seized about one hundred gallons of liquor at Chilcat last week.

(From the Alaska Free Press.)

It is reported that the new steamship company, which has secured the Alaska mail contract, has relet the mail to the P. C. S. S. Co., until the first of September and that they will then put on a line of their own. Private letters from San Francisco also corroborates this assertion, and it is very probable that we will have another line of steamers running here this fall.

Ohman Bros., of Douglas City, will ship a large lot of salted salmon below on the next steamer. They are salting the Takou salmon, and are getting all the fish they can handle.

Work is stopped on nearly all the mines on account of scarcity of powder. There is talk of suing the steamship company for damages, as they had made contracts for furnishing a certain amount of powder and had failed to do it, thus stopping the mills for want of ore.

Messrs. Whalen and Murray left Juneau last spring for St. James Bay, where they have spent the summer prospecting. They have made several good locations, one of which carries considerable free gold, and they will return in a few days and put in the balance of the season in development work on their new finds.

Several reports of big placer strikes were reported this week, but it seems they have all turned out to be mere flashes in the pan.

Barrister Maloney and Contractor Young have unearthed the "lost rocker," but they are careful not to give it away.

This week we were shown an assay of some Glacier bay silver ore, taken from a two-foot vein owned by R. H. Hoag. The assay gave returns of $38 silver.

Harvey A. Smith, a farmer living at Castle Hill, Me., had a terrible battle with a mad stallion on Monday. He hitched the stallion on the barn floor, removed the harness and was taking him to his stall when the animal suddenly attacked him. The wind blew the door shut and Smith found himself imprisoned on the barn floor with the frantic stallion. For nearly half an hour he fought with no weapon but his hats, leaping aside to avoid the assaults as much as possible, but being often knocked down and fearfully bruised. He found his strength failing and was just making up his mind that it was all up with him when the stallion in some way disengaged a sled stake from the mow and Smith saw it rolling toward him on the floor. Seizing the stake, he swung it with all his strength, and, striking the animal just behind the ear, with one blow laid him dead at his feet. Mr. Smith was terribly cut and bruised by the stallion's teeth and hoofs, but his injuries are not dangerous.

A book agent at St. Thomas on Saturday forged the name of Mr. John Carling, Minister of Agriculture, to a cheque for $50, and with this document paid a bill of $14 to a livery stable keeper, receiving the change. He has not yet been caught.

According to all accounts the storm which occurred throughout Manitoba on Friday did a good deal of damage to the crops. It appears to have lasted for nearly nine hours, and to have come up from the southeast. Hail and rain fell in torrents, and the lightning is said to have "filled the heavens" at times. It will probably turn out, however, that the reports of damage done to the wheat have been exaggerated. Except where the grain has been threshed out by the hail the grain will doubtless recover from the lodging after a few fine days.

ORIENTAL ITEMS.

News From Papers Received by the Last Steamer.

By the steamer City of Peking, which arrived yesterday, files of Chinese and Japanese papers have been received. The following items have been collated from them:

It was reported on the 18th of July that the waters of the Yellow River were again very high, and at some places had overflowed the banks and washed down several of the Chinese telegraph poles. In consequence, there is no communication from Shanghai with Tientsin or Chefoo.

An alarmingly sharp rise in the price of rice took place during the week ending July 22nd, and it was then one dollar per picul dearer than a fortnight previous.

A private telegram has been received in Singapore, reporting the breakdown of H. M. S. Redpole on the coast of Java. When off the coast of Batavia, the low-pressure cylinder broke down, and, with some difficulty, the vessel shaped a course for Taujong Priok, which port she reached in safety. The necessary repairs were to take place there, and it was expected that the Redpole would resume her voyage on the 9th of July.

The following paragraphs from the Japan papers illustrate the humors of the first Japanese parliamentary election:

A telegram from Niigata, dated the 1st inst., informs us that a mob of about three hundred people collected at Aikawa, Sado Island, Niigata Prefecture, on the 30th ultimo, in connection with the elections of the House of representatives, and destroyed the houses of six members of the Daido Danketsu party. It is stated that the disturbance was instigated by the Kaishinto party.

Mr. Aral Shogo, the member for Tochikiken, was shot at on the 30th ult., while passing Mibuon-Hara, a lonely place near Nasuno. It is presumed that the attempt was made by a political opponent—fortunately it was not successful.

Messrs. K. Hamaoka and Y. Nakamura, who have been elected members of Parliament for the Kyoto district, belong to the Komin Kwai. Their political opponents, it is said, have threatened to kill them, and four policemen have been sent from Kami and Shimo Kyo police station for their protection.

A correspondent writing to the Shinonomé Shimbun on the 1st of this month states that 250 persons belonging to the Kaishin or Progressive Party were arrested the previous evening on the charge of forming a conspiracy to steal the ballot box if their party was not successful at the poll.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

A GRAND BALL.

A Committee Appointed to Wait on Admiral Hotham.

About twenty of Victoria's leading citizens were present at the city hall last evening in answer to the call of Mayor Grant for a meeting to decide on some means of entertaining Rear-Admiral Hotham and the officers of the fleet now lying at Esquimalt. Among those present were Hon. John Robson, Hon. D. W. Higgins, Hon. Theodore Davie, D. M. Eberts, M. P. P., T. R. Smith, Ald. Holland, W. T. Drake, Wm. Whyte, W. J. Dowler, G. Leiser, Robt. McIntosh, Ald. Goodacre and others. The mayor, after informing those present of the object of the meeting, said the admiral and officers had shown the citizens a great deal of courtesy and something should be done to show the appreciation of the citizens for those favors.

On motion the mayor was elected chairman and Wm. Wayte secretary.

T. R. Smith said the usual entertainment afforded to the fleet was a ball, and he moved that a committee be appointed to wait on the Admiral and ask him if that would be acceptable and what date would be convenient. The motion was seconded and unanimously carried, and the Mayor, Hon. D. W. Higgins and T. R. Smith were appointed as a committee.

A general committee was then elected, consisting of those gentlemen present, the mayor and and aldermen, the members of the Local and Dominion house, judges of the Supreme Courts, commandant and officers of C Battery and the local militia, Hon. Levy Meyers, American Consul, the proprietors of the two papers and a large number of the principal business men. The meeting then adjourned to meet again at the call of the special committee.

INHERITED.

Miss Granger Scores a Great Success Last Night.

The distinguished emotional actress, Miss Maude Granger, created almost favorable impression last night upon her debut before a Victoria audience. Personally she is a charming woman, her acting is almost faultless, carrying her audience with her as she will, and she dresses her part superbly. Her opening play was "Inherited," the production of which in Paris last summer was one of the most interesting dramatic events of the season. As Helen the mad wife and mother, Miss Granger several times moved many of the audience to tears, and held them spellbound until the final fall of the curtain, by her powerful portrayal of the touching character.

Her support was exceptionally good. Chas. H. Mestayer as Dr. Raymond was dignified and natural. Harry Mainhall, who enacted the roll of Julian, son of Dr. Raymond and husband of the unfortunate Helen, was graceful and unassuming in the exacting part. Claude H. Brooke, as Sammy Saunders, "an enthusiastic young American," was clever and humorous, making the most of the only comedy part in the play. Harry French, as Perkins, was laughable, and would no doubt be seen to advantage in a more desirable part.

Miss Carrie Eberts, as Fay Merwin, was charming. Miss Estha Williams, as Alice Pelham, had a most difficult and trying part, which she executed in a finished manner. Little baby Parker won the hearts of the audience with her quaint ways, and pretty songs. She is a lovely little five-year-old, daughter of an American actor now dead, from whom she evidently inherits much talent, as even at her tender age she seems to appreciate the requirements of the part assigned to her, and is altogether "too sweet for anything."

To-night the famous play, "The Creole," will be presented, Miss Granger assuming the character of Cora, in a new version of the drama. The theatre will no doubt be packed to-night, as it is seldom Victorians have the opportunity of seeing so good a company in so good a play. This is the closing night of Maude Granger's engagement.

TRADES ASSEMBLY.

Decide to Call a Public Meeting—Arbitration Recommended at Wellington.

A special meeting of the Victoria Trades Assembly was held last evening to take into consideration what line of action should be pursued with regard to the trouble existing between mine-owners and miners at Wellington. A meeting was suggested early last week, but it was decided to delay action until matters would thoroughly develop themselves, and it could be seen whether the sending of an armed force to Wellington was really justifiable. In the light of recent events the Assembly thought that there was no necessity for the presence of troops in Wellington, and as a representative body feels constrained to call a public meeting of citizens and endorse the protest of the citizens of Nanaimo against what they believe to be a subversion of the true spirit and meaning of the act in such cases made and provided.

At the same time the Assembly believes that the differences existing between the Messrs. Dunsmuir and the striking miners are not so great but that they might be satisfactorily adjusted by arbitration. The miners have agreed to submit their case to arbitration, and if the Messrs. Dunsmuir are as confident of the justice of their cause as they declare they are, they should not be afraid to meet their employees through a committee composed of reasonable men selected by the two parties directly interested. Therefore it has been decided to hold a mass meeting on Thursday evening at the Victoria Theatre, at which all the prominent men of the city will be invited to take seats on the platform. A pressing invitation has been extended to Tully Boyce, president of the Miners' Association, to be present.

Only a Sister.

My sister and I each tried a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters with great success for bilious headache. We recommend it to all as a specific for headache. MISS CARRIE SCHERER, Baden, Ontario.

Meeting Adjourned.

The meeting of the board of school trustees, called for this evening has been adjourned for one week as several matters referred to committee have not yet been advanced sufficiently for report owing to the fact that the schools have just opened again.

Sons of England.

The steamer Princess Louise left on Sunday night for New Westminster and is engaged to-day in conveying a party of excursionists from New Westminster to Plumper's Pass, the occasion being the first annual picnic of the Sons of England. The steamer will take the picnicers back to-night and be down in time to leave for the north on Thursday at 4 o'clock.

New President of the Y. M. I.

A meeting of the members of the local Y. M. I. was held at their rooms in the Bishop's palace last night, and the resignation of the president, Father Van Nevel, received and accepted as that gentleman has to remain at the Quamichan mission where he has been transferred by order of the Bishop. Mr. Thomas Deasy was elected president in Father Van Neval's place, and will no doubt fill the chair with honor.

In Harness Again.

Mr. W. R. Higgins, one of our best known young men, has resumed "the practice of his profession," which is the real estate business. No matter how crowded a business there is said to be always room at the top, and Mr. H. will endeavor by careful attention to the interests of his clients and honest dealing, to be somewhere in that vicinity. The offices of the new firm are in the White House building, Government street.

Economical House Warming.

All of the finest modern business buildings and private houses are heated by steam and hot water and the old fashioned stove dispensed with. Among the advantages gained are an even temperature, no coal dust on the furniture, and a saving of fuel and room. See the Safford Patent Radiators now displayed at Richardson & Heathorn's before placing your order. They are simple in construction, highly ornamental, and there are over 20,000 of them in use, which speaks volumes for their worth. aug11-1w

Thought It Was Dead.

The Tory morning paper announces that the Liberal-Conservative Association will hold its usual monthly meeting this evening in the Foresters' Hall. We make the announcement in order that Liberals as well as Conservatives may know that they are expected to assemble this evening. We really supposed that the institution had died from suffocation of votes at the recent local election, but it appears that there is a kick or two left in the hermaphroditical organization. But what means the meeting? Are we on the eve of an election for the Dominion House?

A Convenience.

The steamer Rainbow left this morning with a full load of freight. The action of the C. P. N. company in including Westminster in the route laid out for this steamer is appreciated by shippers, as it enables them to send to the mainland four times per week instead of three as heretofore. It is also extremely convenient for parties resident on the mainland, notably when the steamer from San Francisco arrives on Sunday night or Monday morning as in the case of the Walla Walla yesterday. The Rainbow having taken this morning the fruit and other freight ex Walla Walla.

STREET WORK STOPPED.

Twenty-Seven Corporation Employees Paid off To-Day.

This afternoon City Treasurer Kent paid off 27 of the city employees who have been doing street work. This course has been adopted on account of a scarcity of funds, the money set aside for street work being nearly exhausted. It is a pity that the work has got to be stopped, as the wages bill of this detachment of men represents monthly some $1500. Many of the laborers are poor men and to be thrown out of employment is a serious thing with them.

FAILED TO APPEAR.

An Alleged Wife-Beater Does Not Care to Face the Magistrate.

A man named Thomas Johnson was summoned to appear in the police court this morning and answer to the charge of beating and abusing the wife of his bosom, this being a favorite pastime of Thomas'.

Just before court opened an officer was busy making out a summons charging the said Thomas Johnson with using vile, profane and insulting language to an officer while in the discharge of his duty. It appears that when the policeman served the first summons on Johnson, that worthy replied by a liberal tirade of abuse, the general tone of which reflected on the parentage of the officer. The alleged wife beater and user of vulgar language did not, however, have the terrors of the police court before his eyes, and consequently did not appear in answer to the written invitation of the magistrate.

In consequence of this impoliteness, and desirous that the court should have the pleasure of Mr. Johnson's company, acting Supt. Walker sent a trusty and stalwart henchman after the recalcitrant Johnson, and he is now safely locked up in cell 9427, and to-morrow will appear before the police magistrate on another charge of contempt.

For the South.

The steamer Umatilla, which left for San Francisco this morning, took down the following Victoria passengers: D. Ross, A. W. Smith, Mrs R. Warwick, W. H. Hall, Wm. Moser, jr., J. V. Blanchard, H. Plowman, G. R. Warwick and wife, Mrs. John Haggerty, Mrs. M. T. Davidson, Mrs. Hayne and daughter, Mrs. McIntosh, Henry Marbeuf, jr., A. Haynes, M. C. Fitzgerald, James Shaw, Mrs. Bushby and Miss Bushby.

Might Prevailed.

A vacant space between two teams on the express wagon stand was the objective point of the drivers of two express teams this morning. One of the rigs was drawn by two heavy horses, the other by one light one. The single rig got the coveted position the least fraction of a second the quickest, but before the horse could be got into a settled position the heavy team drove up and fairly scrouged it off. The driver of the ousted wagon was naturally wild, but being a man evidently desirous of preserving the peace, did not indulge in those expletives supposed to be inseparable with the infuriated jehu. A sort of friendly growl ensued, but it soon ceased, and the rigs straightened up in line to wait for customers. Then there were six teams between Government street and Langley street, and the space between each was very slight. It could not be said to be in accordance with the by-law at all events, as it would have been a matter of impossibility to drive between them.

No one doubts that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy really cures catarrh, whether the disease be recent or of long standing, because the makers of it clinch their faith in it with a $500 guarantee, which isn't a mere newspaper guarantee, but "on call" in a moment. That moment is when you prove that its makers can't cure you. The reason for their faith is this: Dr. Sage's remedy has proved itself the right cure for ninety-nine out of one hundred cases of catarrh in the head, and the World's Dispensary Medical Association can afford to take the risk of your being the one hundredth.

The only question is—are you willing to make the test, if the makers are willing to take the risk? If so, the rest is easy. You pay your druggist 50 cents and the trial begins. If you're wanting the $500 you'd get something better—a cure.

The Naval Ball.

At last night's meeting it was decided to give a grand naval ball at an early date, and the item about the proposed arrangements in another column will be read with interest. But something of more importance to the general public is the question of health during the heated term, Dr. Sage's diarrhœa balsam is effective. Believed to be Jonahs.

The last trip up of the steamer Walla Walla was a rather rough one and the nautical people aboard laid the trouble chiefly to the fact that several parsons and a hearse were aboard, both of which are considered by seafaring men as Jonahs of the very first water.

Surrey Agricultural Association.

The directors of this society decided to raise the prize list this year to close on $700, compared with $400 last season. The prizes at the coming show for best bull and stallions will be $25 each, in place of $5 awarded last year. There is also a prize of $25 for the best collection of agricultural implements or machinery.

The Victorian Wins.

Mr. G. A. McTavish's naptha steam yacht, the Rita, and Paul Shalze's Lilian of the same make, met in Esquimalt yesterday afternoon and had a brush around to this barbor. The Rita, the Victoria yacht, soon took the lead and maintained her advantage until her wharf was reached, and to-day a broom stands on her mast head.

Will Not be Detained.

The erroneous impression prevalent that the steamer Princess Louise would be detained from going north as a result of the slight accident which occurred on her last trip is without foundation. Intending passengers and shippers are assured that the steamer will leave as soon after the hour specified in the advertisement in another column as possible. The mails will close at 3 p.m. and all freight must be on board not later than 4 p. m.

From Alaska.

The steamer Queen arrived from Alaska last night and left for the Sound at 10 o'clock this morning. She brought late Alaska papers for a file of which we are indebted to Captain Carroll. The captain of the schooner Mattie Dyer was seen at Sitka where his schooner is at present beached and said he had never been in Behring sea, and was consequently the victim of a too officious customs officer. He considers it an outrage especially to allow his schooner which is a new one to lie on the beach and rot.

Lockup Improvements.

Since the shooting of the Indian prisoner at the city lockup occurred, the eyes of the authorities have been opened to the necessity of several improvements around the cells, chief among which is the building of a fence so that it is impossible for a prisoner to make a run for it. The next step in the march of improvement is the cutting of a wicket in the gate so that the officer on watch can see who is applying for admittance. Bells are also to be put up that notification can be given to the officer on watch, and also a call bell to the barrack room. These are little matters that have long needed attention, and it is well they are to be done.

Sufficient Notification.

Among the gentlemen who were up in the police court yesterday to answer to the charge of allowing their thistles to grow was a citizen who for the last thirty years has resided in the Province, the half of which time the thistle by-law has been enforced. This gentleman objected to being fined and was of opinion that the city aldermen should notify people that thistles were growing on their land. Alderman Harrison happened to be in court at the time and explained to the gentleman that a warning bail been published in the papers and the city considered that that was sufficient notification as most business men looked at the papers, and especially new advertisements.

A Visitor's Impression.

Among the 200 excursionists on board the steamer Queen is Dr. Gatchel, who is writing a novel on the adventures of the Queen in Alaska waters. The doctor was thoroughly pleased with the trip, and considers Sitka and Victoria the prettiest of the many cities he has visited. The latter, he says, is destined with a little energy to become the Newport of the Pacific, and he thought that if Victoria was boomed like the Sound cities are that it would soon catch up to and pass them all. He was pleased to see the many improvements going on and hoped when visiting Victoria next year on his way to Japan, to be able to step on to the large steamers from the new outer wharf.

The ship Cordelia has unloaded her cargo of steel rails at Westminster and will commence loading lumber this week for South America.

Thomas Shannon, a well-known Surrey rancher, slipped on the beach at Blaine, on Saturday, and had the misfortune to break his arm. The fracture is a very serious one.

The only cases in the city police court this morning were two drunks, who were fined $5 each, and a number of citizens who allowed their thistles to grow and were fined $4.

The Steamer Wellington is overdue from San Francisco on her way to Wellington, and it is thought that she is being detained by the heavy fog that the pilots report on the Straits.

The eighteen Japanese appeared before Judge Bole at New Westminster yesterday, and by permission pleaded guilty to common assault. After being well lectured they were remanded for sentence.

The plastering and hard finish in the city hall addition is all completed, and the rooms are now being cleaned up for the painters, who will soon be finished, when the building will be ready for business.

The announcement that Mr. R. B. Esnouf had purchased a half interest in the old Steitz restaurant, we are informed by Mr. C. C. Fox, the proprietor, was premature, as no arrangement of the kind has been made.

Ald. Harrison disclaims responsibility for the little broken stones which cover the street in some places. He is not chairman of the street committee, and says he does not wish to wear the honors which should properly belong to Ald. Vigelius.

The best day's fishing at the Alert Bay cannery was the last, when considerably more fish than was needed to fill the 300 cases required to complete the number prepared for were taken. The fishermen celebrated the closing of fishing by forming a long procession of boats laden with fish, and subsequently with a fusilade of musketry.

Among the steerage passengers by the Abyssinia, says the World, were two men who were of especial interest to the crowds at the wharf. They were jewellers from Ceylon who have come to America to try the art of money-making. They are tall, well-built fellows, with intelligent looking faces, short, curly beards, and very dusky complexions. Their dress was peculiarly striking, consisting of ordinary European coats, but their nether extremities were covered by a large, close-fitting skirt of a plaided cotton material.

A Worthy Citizen.

We learn that Mr. Harry Cole has left the Greyhound Hotel, which he has kept since the great fire of 1886, giving that caravansary an enviable reputation as being one of the best kept and managed in the city. Always enterprising and public spirited, Mr. Cole made hosts of friends, who will regret to learn of his severence with the establishment he worked so hard to build up. For the present he will take a short holiday, which he has well earned, with the view of recuperating his health. It is to be hoped that Vancouver will not lose so good a citizen as Harry has ever proved himself to be. He will continue his connection with the Rifle Association, of which he has been honorary treasurer since its inception, and in no small way has aided to keep the Association in life. This morning he handed Dr. Bell-Irving, the vice-president, the silver cup to be shot for at the forthcoming annual matches in September. Mr. Cole's numerous friends will wish him every success in whatever line of business he will take up in future.—Vancouver World.

Italian Miners.

The collier Wellington, which passed up yesterday from San Francisco, was expected to land 50 Italian miners at Departure Bay for Dunsmuir & Co.

Expensive Sprinkling.

A team of horses hitched to a milk wagon started from the outer wharf this morning for town, forgetting however to wait for their driver who appeared a few minutes afterwards only to find his milk had been used to lay the dust. The horses kept agoing and when last seen were going as fast as ever.

The New Dock.

Mr. T. F. Sinclair is making splendid progress on the addition to the outer wharf although he has got a lot of work to do yet. The breakwater has been built out its full length and is now turning to come in again. The space inside the wall is to be filled in with rock, and for that purpose the large hill on the north of the entrance to the outer wharf is being blasted out. The steamer Emma brought down two scow loads of sandstone to-day to be used as casing.

Duty on Chinese.

The agents of the steamer City of Peking calculated closely the number of Chinese she could land in Canada. According to the act only one Chinaman for every fifty tons register is allowed. The City of Peking is 5070 tons and she brought 101 Chinamen, or just the limit. Each of these Mongolians paid $50 head duty, and the customs revenue is accordingly increased $5050 thereby.
